FORUM SPEAKER ADVOCATES UNION, EUROPEAN NATIONS

F. Wilhelm Sollman, for 13 Years in Deutscher Reichstag, Speaks Here

ON UPHEAVAL CAUSES

Claims Real Issue Is to Prevent Hitler Germany's Pre-dominance

An address on current problems in Europe elicited many questions last evening in the Friends Meeting House, the speaker, F. Wilhelm Sollman, for 13 years a member of the Deutscher Reichstag, having as his topic "European Union or European War?".

This was on the occasion of the second of a public forum series sponsored by the Friends Meeting.

"This is a serious topic, especially in times of raging European war," said the speaker, "a staff member of Pendle Hill, graduate school for religious and social studies at Wallingford, and who for 20 years served as editor in chief of the Daily Rheinische Zeitung (Cologne).

Pointing out that such men as Hitler, Mussolini and Stalin are but the consequences of general economic and political diseases, Mr. Sollman recalled the chaotic conditions in Europe down through the centuries, particularly the last one, mentioned the countless wars and revolutions that have caused upheavals in the countries and in the continent.

"I believe the two deeper causes of world disorder are that our modern civilization has proved unable to reconstruct world economy; and the fact that nowhere in the world has a modern civilization been able to solve the tension"—he elaborating on the latter by mentioning the class wars between capital and labor—"and out of these are growing Fascism and Communism in many countries."

There is one lesson to be learned in present European affairs, stated Mr. Sollman, who claimed that the real issue now is to prevent Hitler Germany from becoming predominant, and threatening France and Great Britain. Mr. Sollman told of his own opposition to imperialism, especially to Hitler's policy to create an overwhelming power for Germany. "It is opposed to the spirit of our times. Hitler's imperialism is coming too late," he added. Although he opposed Hitler, the exile from Germany added that he does not blame Hitler for rejecting the moral sermons of the older countries who gained possessions in similar manners. But he hastened to state that there is a difference—the older countries in years gone by having to deal more or less with undeveloped territory.

Hitler's conquests were considered at length. Mr. Sollman being of the opinion that not by such force can the spirit of love for their countries on the part of the conquered peoples be subdued. He referred to the residents of Czechoslovakia, faithful to their nationality for over 400 years. "It is impossible for Hitler to down that deep feeling of nationalism." Poland was likewise considered, these people remaining faithful to their language, culture and traditions down through the ages, in spite of constant threats and conquests. "I believe Hitler will be defeated in both a military and an economic way, but it may take a long time," continued the one who for years stood high in Germany's political affairs.

Asking the question, "What is the effect of Hitler's policy?" the speaker answered it by referring to the facts he is at war with Great Britain, has allied Italy, and provoked Soviet Russia to march into central Europe in order to prevent Hitler's drive to the East. He advanced as a solution to the grave problem a union of European nations, saying such is not a new idea, but has been mentioned at times for the last few centuries.

"I am confident the Germans will overthrow Hitler, but it will be perhaps after years. But the overthrow of Hitler is not a solution of the problem. There still remain the Polish, the Czechoslovakian, and the colonial and other problems." Mr. Sollman told of how the idea of a union in Europe is gaining, and also gave consideration to the obstacles to be encountered, advising at the same time that the obstacles not be over-estimated. In scotching the oft-mentioned difference of languages in the numerous countries, he told of how peacefully for centuries people of Switzerland

We Have No Red Flannels Today!

(By "The Stroller")

I took a ride yesterday, and watched the clothes flapping back and forth on the lines hereabouts. But there wasn't a red flannel among them.

I spotted something terribly red about a block ahead of me, and with a spurt soon reached what I thought was my "prey" but there was bitter disappointment, when the brilliant hue turned out to be that of a dress.

Then I got bold and inquired among some families, and even found several who have never seen red flannels.

Then I gave up.

Claim Success In Air

Helsingfors, Dec. 5.—Finnish airplanes carried out surprise attacks upon the Soviet air base at Murmansk today, destroying 60 planes by means of small incendiary bombs, according to reports received in Helsingfors.

At the same time, three Soviet bombers opened an attack on the Salmijarvi in north Finland, with unknown results. Military quarters asserted that Finland's soldiers had virtually annihilated two full Russian tank regiments, each equipped with 40 heavy tanks. The tanks presumably were demolished by anti tank shells.

Meanwhile, it was reported that additional Russian reinforcements were being landed at Petsamo, where heavy fighting is in progress. Dispatches from Norway said the Russians around Petsamo were receiving reinforcements from Murmansk and were preparing for a major attack against Petsamo, where the Finns were estimated to have concentrated 20,000 of their finest troops. Many hundreds of the reinforcements enroute to safety, were being sent by military ski patrols, searching for them to guide them to safety.

While fighting progressed at the far north, there was almost no activity on the Karelian front and no naval activity along the coast.

The impression grew in Helsingfors that the Russians are resorting to propaganda to undermine the government of Premier Risto Ryti.

Some officials, however, said they believe Finland's stubborn resistance against the Russian onslaught had "stupidified" the Reds, making it necessary for them to reorganize their troops, forces and planes in preparation for large scale attacks.

Rev. Duncombe Offers A Challenge at Men's Rally

TREVOSE, Dec. 5.—"For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation..." was the theme of the Rev. Franklin Duncombe's address last evening at the Methodist men's rally, in Trevese Methodist Church.

His challenge to the men was "Are you proud of the gospel?" This challenge had its power in the way, step by step, the speaker called to the men reasons why they should be proud of what the gospel is, and what it has done.

The Rev. Duncombe is pastor of Cynwyd Church in Bala-Cynwyd. The following Methodist Churches and their pastors were represented at the rally: Rev. F. C. Thomas, Yardley, president of Bucks County Ministerium, who presided; Rev. J. H. Barnes, Jr., Scottsville; Rev. C. H. Weller, Morrisville; Rev. S. Gaskell, Emille; Rev. C. E. Boraston, Newtown; Rev. There was a total attendance of 100 men, with Newtown having the largest delegation, with the exception of the host church.

A resolution was offered from the floor that another rally be held within a three-month period. The men voted their support and an invitation to go to Newtown was accepted. The date is to be fixed by the ministerium. Refreshments and special music aided in the success of the rally.

The Dewey Position

Washington, Dec. 4. SOME time this week, Mr. Thomas E. Dewey, of New York, in a Minnesota speech, will make known his views on various national issues and thus spike one of the arguments that have been made against him—to wit, that no one knows where he stands on anything. It can be assumed that Mr. Dewey will make a good speech and express sound views. He is a very intelligent young man who knows that in this, the initial utterance of his campaign, he cannot afford to make a poor impression.

HOWEVER, it is doubtful that Mr. Dewey's speech will get him any delegates he has not now. He may do himself a lot of good and get a favorable press—but the interesting fact is that Mr. Dewey has become available for the Presidency and acquired a good many delegates without any expressed views at all. Mr. Dewey has become available because of his success as District Attorney in securing the conviction of various conspicuous criminals with powerful political affiliations. In the prosecution of these he established a reputation for competency, independence and fearlessness. It was this that led to his nomination for Governor last year. Had he been elected there would today be no question about his nomination. He would be recognized generally as the inevitable Republican, standard-bearer for 1940.

AS things are, the sort of fight he made and the size of his State's electoral vote are the assets that make him a formidable contender for the prize. Though defeated, he made a remarkable showing. A Continued on Page Four

DRUNKEN DRIVERS PLEAD GUILTY IN COURT

It Was Not Necessary To Keep The Jury In Court On First Day

GRANT THREE DIVORCES

DOYLESTOWN, Dec. 5.—Drunk drivers pleaded guilty in Bucks county criminal court yesterday so that it was not necessary to keep the jury the first day of court. They were excused until this morning.

Fred Worman, 35, Pipersville, who pleaded guilty to drunken driving for the second time, was sentenced by Judge Calvin S. Boyer to pay the costs and serve three months to three in the Bucks County Prison.

"I would think that any man in his sound mind who had one experience with the courts in drunken driving would never again when he went out to drive, take a drink," Judge Boyer remarked.

Joseph, Ernest Richards, 58, Kintnersville, former vice president of a Philadelphia bank, now retired, pleaded guilty to failing to stop his motor vehicle at the scene of an accident. He was sentenced by Judge Boyer to pay a fine of $100 and costs.

Charles A. Jamieson, 22, 233 Dorance street, Bristol, was sentenced by President Judge Hiram H. Kellier to pay a fine of $100 and costs for drunken driving. He was arrested in South Langhorne on October 22, by Corporal R. D. Evans.

Robert Wagner, Jr., Phila., who pleaded guilty to driving while drunk and William G. Dakin, Humesville, who pleaded guilty to the same charge, were both sentenced to 20 days in the Bucks County Prison.

Wilbur Richards, 29, 438 Demlar street, Phila., pleaded guilty to driving while drunk and received a 2 months to two years sentence in the County Prison imposed by Judge Boyer.

"In the nine years that I have been in this court I don't remember another case in which a drunken driver had the audacity to send a bill for damages to the other motorist involved in an accident," Judge Boyer said to Richards.

Three divorces were handed down in the Court of Common Pleas yesterday as follows: George C. Kohlhaas versus Margaret Kohlhaas; Florence Kennedy versus Francis S. Kennedy; and Philip A. Marcianite versus R. Tacy Marcianite.

Locks With Favor On the Canal Acquisition by Penna.

That he looks with great favor upon the state acquiring possession of the Lehigh Canal, was the thought expressed by J. Albert Stewart, state secretary of Forests and Waters, following an inspection of the canal yesterday.

Mr. Stewart, together with Assemblymen Thomas B. Stockham, Morrisville, and Wilson L. Yeakey, Perkasie, William Taylor, secretary of the Delaware Valley Protective Association; William Hunsicker, county commissioner-elect, and many others, participated in a tour of inspection of the canal, from Morrisville to Easton.

Secretary Stewart did not hesitate to state he looked with favor upon the state of Pennsylvania acquiring as a gift, the canal, if the plan as outlined in bills introduced by Representatives Stockham and Yeakey can be worked out satisfactorily. The bills are so worded as to place the state in a position to accept the canal as a gift if the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company offers it.

The motor cavalcade left Morrisville at 10 a. m., with the party being enlarged at New Hope. Luncheon was partaken of at Stockton, N. J., and in the evening the party was joined at dinner near Point Pleasant by the board of directors and other members of the Protective Association. Also making the tour was an agent of the federal government attached to the Department of Forests and Waters at Harrisburg.

Secretary Stewart stated that he sees no serious physical condition but what can be readily remedied. He expressed the opinion that acquisition of the canal by the state will add to the fine scenic area of the Delaware valley extending from Easton to Morrisville, and add to the beautiful historic Washington Crossing Park section.

SCHOOL BOARD REORGANIZES; SEATS TWO NEW MEMBERS

Doron Green Re-Elected As President and Begins 24th Term

VOCATIONAL CLASSES

NYA Granted Use of Manual Training Shop 12 Hours Per Week

Bristol school board reorganized last night by the election of a president and vice-president, voted to permit the Community Center to use the manual training shop facilities outside of school hours, seated two new members of the Board who were elected at the general election held in November, and transacted routine business.

The two new members were Mrs. Edith Harding and Charles Weik. Both presented their certificates of election and oaths of office taken before local justices of the peace.

After the reading of the minutes and the report of treasurer, Emil Metzger, the order of business was transposed so as to afford an opportunity to Robert W. Weeks, State Engineer, NYA, to explain to the Board a plan whereby the NYA would use the manual training shop of the schools 12 hours per week for a wood-working project. Youths not now attending school, and between the ages of 18 to 25 will be employed and paid $14.48 per month for 48 hours of work. The articles they will make will be such as tables and etc., which can be used in the schools and other public agencies. Those employed will be paid by the Federal Government and they will be under the supervision of an instructor who may be the present manual training teacher, who will be compensated for his extra time. The agency procuring the articles made will be required to furnish the material for them. The School Board will be required to supply heat, light and power.

Arthur P. Brady raised the question of competition with private industry, which was discussed.

The Board authorized Warren P. Snyder, principal, to co-operate with Mr. Weeks in the formation of vocational classes as outlined.

Arthur P. Brady, chairman of Property Committee, reported a new stove for heating water had been placed in the Washington street building, the high school field had been cleaned and that the nursery school now in the Beaver street school building would pay the water rent for that building.

Mrs. Horace N. Davis reported she had visited the school buildings at Bath street, Wood street and the high school building. She informed the Board upon her observations.

Mr. Snyder told the Board that the Girl Reserves had distributed 25 baskets filled with food at Thanksgiving and that each basket was valued at $3. Plans are being made for a Vesper Service at the high school on December 24th.

The great success of Parents' night was commented upon and the suggestion made that another be held in the near future.

Mr. Snyder was authorized to procure prices on all-metal chairs.

The Alumni Association was granted the use of a class room for meetings on the fourth Monday evening of each month.

The Board appropriated $100 for new tools in the shop of the maintenance engineer.

The Board voted to contribute $50 to Schoolmen's Week. The Bristol teachers will attend on March 8th and 9th.

E. C. Ramsey, foreign news correspondent, will speak at the high school on December 21st.

Mrs. Horace N. Davis was named to represent the School Board at the annual meeting of school directors in February to be held in Harrisburg. Mr. Snyder will also attend.

The Property Committee was authorized to consider the reconduction of the high school field.

FINNS MASSACRED BY STALIN

The massacring of thousands of Finns by Stalin makes it more plain what Britain and France are fighting against in this war. They are fighting as cunning, ruthless and murderous pair of criminals as ever menaced the world—Hitler and Stalin.

When Senator Pittman, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, calls upon the administration at Washington to sever diplomatic relations with Stalin, he voices the sentiment of 90 per cent of the American people. There has been a growing realization in the United States for some time that recognition of Stalin by the Roosevelt administration, after the Harding, Coolidge and Hoover administrations had refused to have any truck with the bolshevik outfit, was a blunder that would have to be rectified sooner or later. The time now seems to have arrived.

Stalin had as much excuse for unleashing his hordes of barbarians against Finland as he would have had for attacking Bermuda. Finland was minding its own business and paying its debts. Perhaps the fact that Finland was making regular payments on its debt to the United States is what irked the counter-actor in the Kremlin.

Although Finland has no defensive alliances with other nations, the attack upon that unhappy land may prove the spark that will set Eastern Europe and the Balkans ablaze, with ultimate consequences which no one can predict.

There was nothing original or surprising in the tactics employed by Stalin to bring about the desired crisis with respect to Finland. The method was that made familiar by Hitler in Austria, Czechoslovakia and in Poland. It was supplemented with a touch of characteristic Soviet cruelty.

All of the nerve-racking preliminaries, the warnings and threats and the military and naval activity, were recognized by the civilized world as a prelude to another of those ruthless operations through which small nations cease to exist.

About six weeks ago President Roosevelt warned Russia—that is, Stalin—at least by implication, that American opinion would be shocked by any attempt on the part of the Reds to interfere with the existence of Finland as an independent nation. More recently Great Britain has made a mild plea for restraint. But Stalin cares no more for civilized opinion than does Hitler and therefore there never was much hope that opinion would be potent as a restraining factor.

Recent disclosures of Communist activities in the United States, financed by Stalin, coupled with the added proof of the real nature of the Russian "government" now supplied by its invasion of Finland, certainly make it imperative that the stooge of Stalin who masquerades as the Soviet Ambassador to Washington be kicked out of this country forthwith.

If Stalin's man is not in Washington as a spy, he is there to finance Communist plots in the United States. Has the boring from within proceeded to such an extent that this rat will be permitted to remain?

Sociologists find a new disposition in the American to think things through. On the other hand, he now picks a gasoline by the rest room.

LOOKING FORWARD

By Franklyn Waltman

Publicity Director, Republican National Committee

More and more the word "slick" has become associated with the New Deal. Folks used to say that the New Dealers were smart and clever. But now they speak of them as being "slick." Behind the expression is the growing thought that the New Deal constantly is trying to put something over—that it is not laying all its cards on the table.

In view of recent incidents it appears that the average man in using the word "slick" as a description of the New Deal has properly appraised what is going on in Washington. It will be recalled that the first time the word "slick" generally was applied to a New Deal activity was during the Supreme Court packing controversy.

Mr. Roosevelt, it will further be recalled, asked Congress to pass legislation which would enable him to increase the size of the Supreme Court. He argued that the courts were behind in their work and that those jurists over 70 years of age needed assistance and that therefore, if they did not resign at that age, he should be authorized to name wet nurses for them.

Court Plan Called Slick

This scheme was termed "slick" because it was perfectly obvious that Mr. Roosevelt was not in the slightest concerned over congestion in the courts—he had failed to fill vacancies which had long existed—or over the age of the jurists. Mr. Roosevelt obviously wanted to pack the Supreme Court in order to get favorable opinions from that tribunal on certain legally dubious pieces of legislation. His plan was so "slick" it did not work!

More recently the country witnessed another New Deal effort which brought forth the term "slick." It was the scheme, after the passage of the Neutrality Act barring American ships from belligerent ports, to transfer a number of United States Line ships to the registry of Panama. Not a word about such a move was uttered during the debate in the Senate on the "cash and carry" provisions. Yet the plans obviously were then being formulated and they violated the spirit of those provisions.

Only the fact that the public generally recognized the scheme as "slick" and made known its dislike for "slick" undertakings prevented its consummation. One day Mr. Roosevelt and his Secretary of State seemed disposed to defend the action. The next day they turned their backs on it. Again it was found that being "slick" does not pay!

F. D. R. Puts Over Slick One

But Mr. Roosevelt seems to learn slowly. Hardly had the Panama ship scheme been laid aside than Mr. Roosevelt made a speech laying the cornerstone of the new Jefferson Memorial in Washington. Extemporaneously he inserted a sentence into his speech which at first hearing might indicate he would seek a third term. Two days later he told the newspapermen he had done so solely for his amusement at watching the expressions on their faces. Pretty "slick," eh what? Not all the newspapermen thought so!

Now, however, there comes to light another New Deal effort to be "slick." This time about a more serious matter. Under the heading "PLAN DEVISED TO DODGE U. S. DEBT LIMIT," the Washington Post carried, under the name of Cecil B. Dickson of the International News Service, this story:

"A secret plan to avert the necessity of Congressional action increasing the present $45,000,000,000 national debt limit in the election year of 1940 has been devised by Administration financial experts, it was learned last night.

"The plan, calling for use of the borrowing powers of the New Deal lending agencies to help finance Government expenditures, was conceived after the Democratic leaders advised the Administration that the issue of raising the debt ceiling imperiled the chances of a Democratic victory in the Presidential election.

"Under President Roosevelt's budget estimates the national debt will reach $44,458,000,000 on June 30. The Treasury reported today it had passed the $41,210,000,000 mark on November 15.

"The secret plan entails the selling of securities by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the Home Owners Loan Corporation and the Federal Housing Administration to private investors, the funds to be used to retire obligations of those agencies held by the Treasury."

Plan to Juggle Books

In other words, Mr. Dickson reported that a plan is on foot by the New Dealers to engage in a little juggling of the books, a little financial chicanery, in order to avoid letting Congress decide whether the national debt limit should be increased.

The Government would still owe the money, whether it is borrowed directly by one of its agencies or by the Treasury, since loans of the former are guaranteed by the Treasury. The only difference would be that the agency loans would not be reflected in the national debt figure. The true condition of Federal finances would be hidden from public view—and the New Deal thus hopes to escape the consequences of its reckless, extravagant spending policies. Pretty "slick," isn't it? But it is too "slick" to work. The American people have become wise to "slick" schemes and this one will arouse their hostility, just as did the "slick" Supreme Court and Panama ship registry schemes!

Merchants Prepared To Cater To Shoppers

only one of gifts in this particular category to be offered by Norman's 416 Mill street, for there are to be had note boxes to attach to the front door, or along-side it; and mail boxes of wood, which boast of leather thong and leather hinges. Any of these will add to the true hominess of the main entrance.

Should the young lad of the household have a nautical trend of mind, and desire his own room decked in that fashion, Dries' Furniture Store, at Mill and Pond streets, will aid. For there is displayed a ship's lantern, finished in gold, with red glass giving off a glowing light. Atop the lantern is a brilliant anchor, and the current is turned on by means of a ship's wheel button. One of the newer notes in bedroom lamps is also struck by offerings of this store—set of three lamps entirely of glass, each in one complete piece. The pair of lamps for the dressing table are about eight or ten inches high, the pretty glass tube resembling somewhat a torchiere, while the bed lamp is also entirely of one piece of glass. In tones of pink, flower-decked, the metal part is of silver.

When looking for something practical, yet sturdy and inexpensive for the wee folks, LaBelle Shoe Shop, 308 Mill street, offers a variety of shoes priced at less than a dollar. If the recipients be quite small, there are fine offerings in white, while for those who are already taking many steps, black and brown are offered. For the miss who sees many a good time ahead at the holiday season, evening slippers would be the suggestion at this store.

Ida's Beauty Salon, 311 Mill street, has advance notice that this is to be a happy and most active Christmas season. The method of foretelling is by the number of the feminine customers who have already had permanent waves add to their appearance at this shop, and the additional number who are making appointments for days nearer to the 25th. Knowing full well that facials, manicures, the proper hair-do, and other items in the beautician's art, can mean so much toward making gay times happier affairs, Ida's Salon is equipped to make milady look her best on all occasions.

"LOVE'S INTERLUDE" by MAY-CHRISTIE

CHAPTER XXXVI

Tarry changed the subject, as he always did when it took an unpleasant turn.

"So you've lost Randall? One of my best bets! What happened between you?"

"I turned him and his rotten offer down."

"So?" He narrowed his eyes. "Seems you don't play your cards properly. Others are smarter than you are."

"Whom?"
"Amanda Stone, for one. Her brother may be noble—though I doubt it—he's out for his own financial interests and make no mistake about it. But Amanda doesn't miss a trick. Bet my boots, she'll land him!"

Moirá looked curiously through the social columns of the papers in the next few days. Amanda's name was indeed linked with Randall's in parties at the El Martino, country-house week-ends, dances, restaurants.

The announcement of their engagement followed all this.

Madison once more! Home!

She was back with her own kind. Lack of money had compelled that move. Her excuse to her father and her aunt was the demolishing of the building where she had her apartment.

They welcomed her warmly. Made much of her, though, in their fond eyes, she was no prodigal returning. They were proud of her.

Job-seeking again.

"But not in a beauty-shop, Moirá! Please—not! Your father's position—do remember it! And your own, dear child!"

Aunt Melissa was a good deal of a snob. Besides, she liked having her niece around. Moirá was a vast help in the house. She shouldered much of the housekeeping.

Weeks passed. Spring came in a rush. Torrentially lovely. A new green world.

It woke longings in Moirá. Longings she had tried to quench forever.

The sap was rising in the trees. Birds built their nests. Their tiny throats poured passionate songs from early morn. The ecstasy of mating filled the air.

An ache of nostalgia possessed her.

Love! What was youth without love?

One's own mate! One's own home!

Oh, father and aunt were kind. But that didn't satisfy her empty heart. The sweet rush of Spring filled her with intolerable yearning.

To see him again . . .

Why had she left New York, where at least there was a possibility of running into him? Hearing of him from friends? The chance that he might telephone?

Waking at dawn to the birds' music, the scent of the flowering lilac tree below her window drugged her like a sweet narcotic. Inhaling its fragrance, she would stare at the primrose sky that was streaking in rose . . . dreaming sweet dreams. Happiness!

Would she ever know happiness? Increasingly restless as the days went on.

The walls of the shabby old house seemed to shut her in with her own thoughts. Riot of Spring in the garden, the tree-lined streets, the flowering commons, were bitter-sweet . . . painfully stirring.

Work! Sure panacea for her uneasiness!

She got a job in the medical department of the Library, cataloging. Nine to five-thirty.

Eighteen dollars a week.

It was "ladylike" employment, to Aunt Melissa's mind.

"I don't see why you want to work when you have me," her father told her. He was all for women in the home. He was old-fashioned. But he raised no real objection. He only wanted to see Moirá happy.

She'd looked too pale and thin—peaked—these past days.

Nor did she bloom out now, shut off from the sun.

But she seemed more contented. She was busy. If he knew she was contributing to the home, he gave no sign of it, man-like.

Tarry wrote that Mrs. Rules' operation was highly successful.

"You've got to hand it to Dr. Stone! He's done a swell job! She looks years and years younger! Moreover, the chap's a bit of an artist. He's sculptured her face into something quite pretty!"

Tarry was jubilant about having made a killing in the Market, unexpectedly, retrieving a good deal of Mrs. Rules' cash.

He enclosed a bill for fifty dollars, part payment on the loan she had advanced.

She used some of the money to buy Spring clothes. For Aunt Melissa a new Spring bonnet.

The remainder to tradesmen. As usual, bills were in arrears.

Tarry wrote again. Another check. Another glowing account of Mrs. Rules' rejuvenation. The accident, it seemed, was turning out a blessing, thanks to the art of the surgeon.

"He'll marry her in the end!"

A third missive pointed to that. Mrs. Rules, in spite of losses on the Market, had "quite a hunk of dough"—and she owned her own apartment. The building was co-operative.

"She wants a trip abroad," wrote Tarry. "Has a yen for Italy in the Spring. I may go with her, to look after her affairs."

May and November! But the calendar had been turned back! November was Spring!

It was fashionable for women in the Forties to wed striplings, especially when lines had been eradicated—faces lifted . . .

"He'll probably be quite good to her as long as she has the money," Moirá thought. Nor did she feel one pang of envy.

She bought a New York Sunday tabloid, one afternoon. There was a photograph, in color, of Amanda, made her quite handsome. She was to be married to Randall the first of June.

An announcement in a local newspaper drove thoughts of Amanda and her fiancé temporarily from her mind.

Dr. Rodney Stone was coming to Madison the day after tomorrow to deliver a lecture on plastic surgery! The Medical Association was to give a dinner in his honor, followed by a reception.

Many of those professors were her father's friends. Was there a chance . . . ?

Would they meet at all?

She brought up the subject that night. (Speak casually. Don't be a fool. Don't seem too keen.)

"Dinner and receptions, Moirá," said her father, "are not in my line. Guess I'm too old. Or out of the running."

"You're not. You're the most distinguished-looking person."

He shook his head.

"If you know this young Dr. Stone, it wouldn't be amiss to drop him a note and invite him to call on you. Aunt Melissa would chaperone you."

She shook out a little laugh. Old-fashioned pet! He wouldn't understand—and there was really nothing to explain—

Dr. Stone didn't give two hoots about her.

And yet—and yet—

The day came. According to the papers, he would arrive at the station at five. Why not slip out of the Library and down to the depot?

What if it did seem like chasing him? One had to go right after one's man in the year 1937. For too long, the old standards had cramped her.

But, arriving there, the train coming in, she hid behind a pile of baggage. Let others welcome Rodney!

No chance of going to the reception in his honor, minus her father's aid.

But the fates were working for her. Busy in the medical department of the Library next afternoon, there was an unexpected stir. A noted visitor was being shown around. The distinguished Dr. Stone!

Don't hang back now. Her supreme chance!

They met. He seemed astonished, definitely pleased.

"I've wanted so much to have a word with you. Important. Where we meet?"

ON THE SCREENS

GRAND THEATRE

Announced as a glamorous picture of the tropics, with melody, laughter, romance and native dancers in new swing-hula routines, Universal's latest musical film, "Hawaiian Nights," comes today and Wednesday to the Grand Theatre.

Featured in the cast are nimble-footed Johnny Downs, Constance Moore, Mary Carlisle, Eddie Quillan, Samuel S. Hinds, Etienne Girardot and Princess Luana.

Two noted musical groups, Matty Malneck and his Orchestra and the Hawaiian string band of Sol Hoopii provide lilted harmony for the gay romantic drama. Already well known for their recordings and radio work, the orchestras will introduce four new song hits especially written for the picture.

BRISTOL THEATRE

"Colorado Convicts Kill 7 Guards; Seize Prison and Murder Hostages." Such were the headlines of the nation's newspapers on October 4, 1929, when one of the most ruthless and bloody prison riots in United States penal history took place.

It was this break, costing the lives of 12 men and a property loss of over $500,000 at the State Penitentiary, Canon City, Col., that suggested the story of Monogram's "Mutiny in The Big House," now playing at the Bristol Theatre, co-starring Charles Bickford and Barton MacLane.

RITZ THEATRE

The late William Gillette was more than a veteran of the American theatre, he was a veteran Sherlock Holmes. Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's great master detective intrigued the actor so much that, with Doyle's permission, he himself wrote the first Sherlock Holmes play.

The result was a lifelong career for the actor, who came to know more about Holmes than any man but his creator. The play, entitled "Sherlock Holmes," now at the Ritz Theatre, opened on May 3, 1899, with the full approval of Conan Doyle, who had read the manuscript and permitted Gillette to adapt much original material.
